Preview:

This is a collection of chiptune tracks that I created for an abandoned NES-styled Shoot 'em Up. It covers a variety of moods, and could probably fit with all sorts of actiony genres.

All the music tracks loop by themselves, with the exception of the boss track which has an "intro" section that leads into the "main" loop.

I've also included the ftm files. If you want to edit the tracks, feel free to download Famitracker and play around.

Attibution is completely optional.

I can't remember the last time I used "amazing" and "public domain" in the same sentence when it comes to chiptunes. But I'm genuinely impressed; these public domain chiptunes truly are amazing! Great job!

That was ripped and reassembled music from our Venus Force Five: The Game for NEC PC-8801 mark II. Once we copyrighted that through JASRAC, and now it was released at Google Play and ITunes Store!

We are strongly recommend to set the name of original author/publisher, otherwise we'll contact system administrator for further deletion of the work from the website. We have all of artist's and work's documents.

Best regards,

These are GREAT, but usually NES songs are catchy. I don't want to be rude, but these aren't very catchy.

Still, great songs. :)

MetroVG Studio Bluebird was a patent troll; disregard everything he said. You are able to use this music in your project.

Hello,

I have been served with a DMCA takedown on my Steam game which used several of these tracks. If you have any of the proof or information that caused you to realize that this was a patent troll, I would greatly apprecaite it. The last thing I want is to get involved in a difficult legal situation over a game I distribute for free on Steam.

Thank you!

@UpsilonGames: Sketchy logic had the music hosted here years before MetroVG listed any proof of ownership and IP filing. Sketchy logic even included the Famitracker 'source code', which MetroVG was unable to produce. The first instance of MetroVG's claim is 4 years after it shows up here on OGA. MetroVG claims the documents were filed in 1991, but was not able to link to a legitimate IP/Copyright/Trademark/Audio-signature site where that is the case, only (poorly) forged documents hosted on a personal fileshare account.

It is not impossible for someone to take a cc0 work, register it as their own, then claim others are violating IP when they "forget" where they got it originally. I'm guessing the DMCA is also patent trolling hoping they'll gain some legitimacy by making your life difficult. Sketchy logic has the legal right to fight the claim and either of you could even sue the claimant for fraudulent takedown, but getting too deep into that may, unfortunately, be more trouble than a free asset is worth for Sketchy or you.

I will PM you the conversation I had with MetroVG if you would like.

I at least have to appeal the DMCA takedown from Steam, which will take a minimum of ten days to apply. This is very frustrating, but as you said it's unlikely I can do anything about it. I'm not even losing profit (because it's a free game); people have just contacted me about being unable to play. :(

If you're willing, please keep me aprised (via PM) of how the appeal goes. I would like to learn as much as I can about the process and response so I can effectively advise others who find themselves in your situation.

Thank you for making this. I am using it in this free to play project on itch.io: https://dpb-ryu.itch.io/adventure-of-baldero

On Level 10, just before the final boss, a shorter loop of track 4 aka Mars is playing.

Hi SketchyLogic!

Your music is amazing!

I've used one of those tracks in my game 'Ganbatte!! Robochan'. It´s available at Itch.io: https://wlenechaves.itch.io/game-ganbatterobochan

It's the boss fight theme. The free demo version has only two stages, but I can send you the complete version for free if you want.

Thank you so much for making your music available! :)
